Greenpan 11 piece set costco

Top critical reviewAll critical reviews> Jason1.0 of 5 starsNeceny moneyView in the United States on September 22, 2020Saylor set of these pans from Costco just two years ago. He did caution and washed them every time as a condition guideline. The coating began to wear out in places causing food residues to stick and stains the pan. It can clean without destroying the rest of the coating can no longer use, because of all the gluing. A waste of money. Spend your money on a reputable brand that will last more than 2 years. I recently bought an induction stove and am looking for a replacement for aluminum members of my cookware collection. I'm mainly interested in tri-ply stainless steel pans, but brands like All-Clad are outside my price range. This set from Costco's website intrigued me: the price point is very tempting, but it also sounds a little too good to be true for the regular, impassable price on three-layer pans, but the listing claims it's really a try-ply with an aluminum core. Does anyone have experience with these or other SS+ ceramic pans? I've never seen anything like it. UPDATE 1/28/20. This dish is coated with a ceramic non-stick Thermolon Evolution that does not contain PFOA, PFAS, lead and cadmium and does not release harmful fumes. Select Costco locations have a GreenPan New York Pro Ceramic Nonstick Cookware 11-Piece Set for sale for $149.99 (after immediate savings), now until February 9, 2020.
